Not illustrated. 1905 Excerpt: . present matrimonial law seems to be in a great medley. The end should be not to favor husbands or wives as such, but to uphold and promote the encouragement and perpetuity of There should be a reward for labor, service and duty in the marriage relation, not merely for the skill to captivate by wiles, or perhaps deceitfully to make a sharp bargain. the family. For that purpose the family state should as far as possible be made, not terrifying, but inviting; nor furnishing a prospect of legal struggles and financial ruin, but of permanence, of economic success, of contentment and happiness. The courts should not afford encouragement or a prospective reward for the party plaintiff who seeks to break up a home. It seldom does good to enslave one of the parties under the principle of permanent alimony, for marriages that have existed but a short time; and such cases are fast creating among many of the most prudent of the unwedded a sense of horror at the very institution. NOTE. The laws presented in this chapter are those of the State of New York, but they are substantially the same in other states, if we except those where the Spanish or French gained a foothold, as in Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico and California. Generally in all the states, married women have the same right and control over their personal earnings outside of services to the family, and over their separate property both real...
