Excerpt: . . . books as decorative furniture, but each book was bought to read and study. It required sixteen wagons to transport his ten thousand books to Washington and it was found that they were written in many languages and comprised in their sweep nearly every department of intellectual activity. When he planned the great University, in which I have the honor to speak, his idea of the curriculum was botany, chemistry, zoology, anatomy, surgery, medicine, natural philosophy, agriculture, mathematics, astronomy, biography, politics, commerce, history, ethics, the law, the industrial and the fine arts and in all of these his versatile mind had some proficiency. Few men in recorded history have been more versatile than Jefferson. In this respect he is only surpassed in our history by Franklin and he belongs to the class of universal genius of which Franklin and Leonardo da Vinci were the greatest...
