The Garfield monument is situated in Lake View Cemetery, in the suburbs. It is built of native sandstone, and in form is large and imposing. A tower fifty feet in diameter rises to a height of 180 feet from the ground. At the base of the tower projects a square porch, decorated externally with an historical frieze. The frieze is divided into panels containing life-sized bas-reliefs that represent the career of Garfield as a teacher, statesman, soldier and President. The last panel represents the body lying in state in the rotunda at the United States Capitol. The five panels contain over one hundred figures. The tower contains twelve colossal allegorical statues, representing the twelve signs of the zodiac. A band of shields, bearing the arms of the States, extends around the tower below the statues. The chapel of the monument is glorious with stained glass, golden mosaic and rich decorations in beautifully-colored marbles. Here the architect has called to his assistance the artist, sculptor, mosaicist and glass-worker, creating one of the richest interiors in the world. The statue is of pure white Carrara marble, mounted on a...
